Kaira Hensler  Kaira’s International Baccalaureate art class project was to create something dealing with metamorphosis. She wanted to work with clay and plaster and was inspired to do the two faces. The faces broke while in the kiln, but Kaira believes it adds to the meaning by showing the separation between the two emotions of “happy” and “sad.”